Jamie was a little boy.
He wondered about everything.
He wondered and wondered.

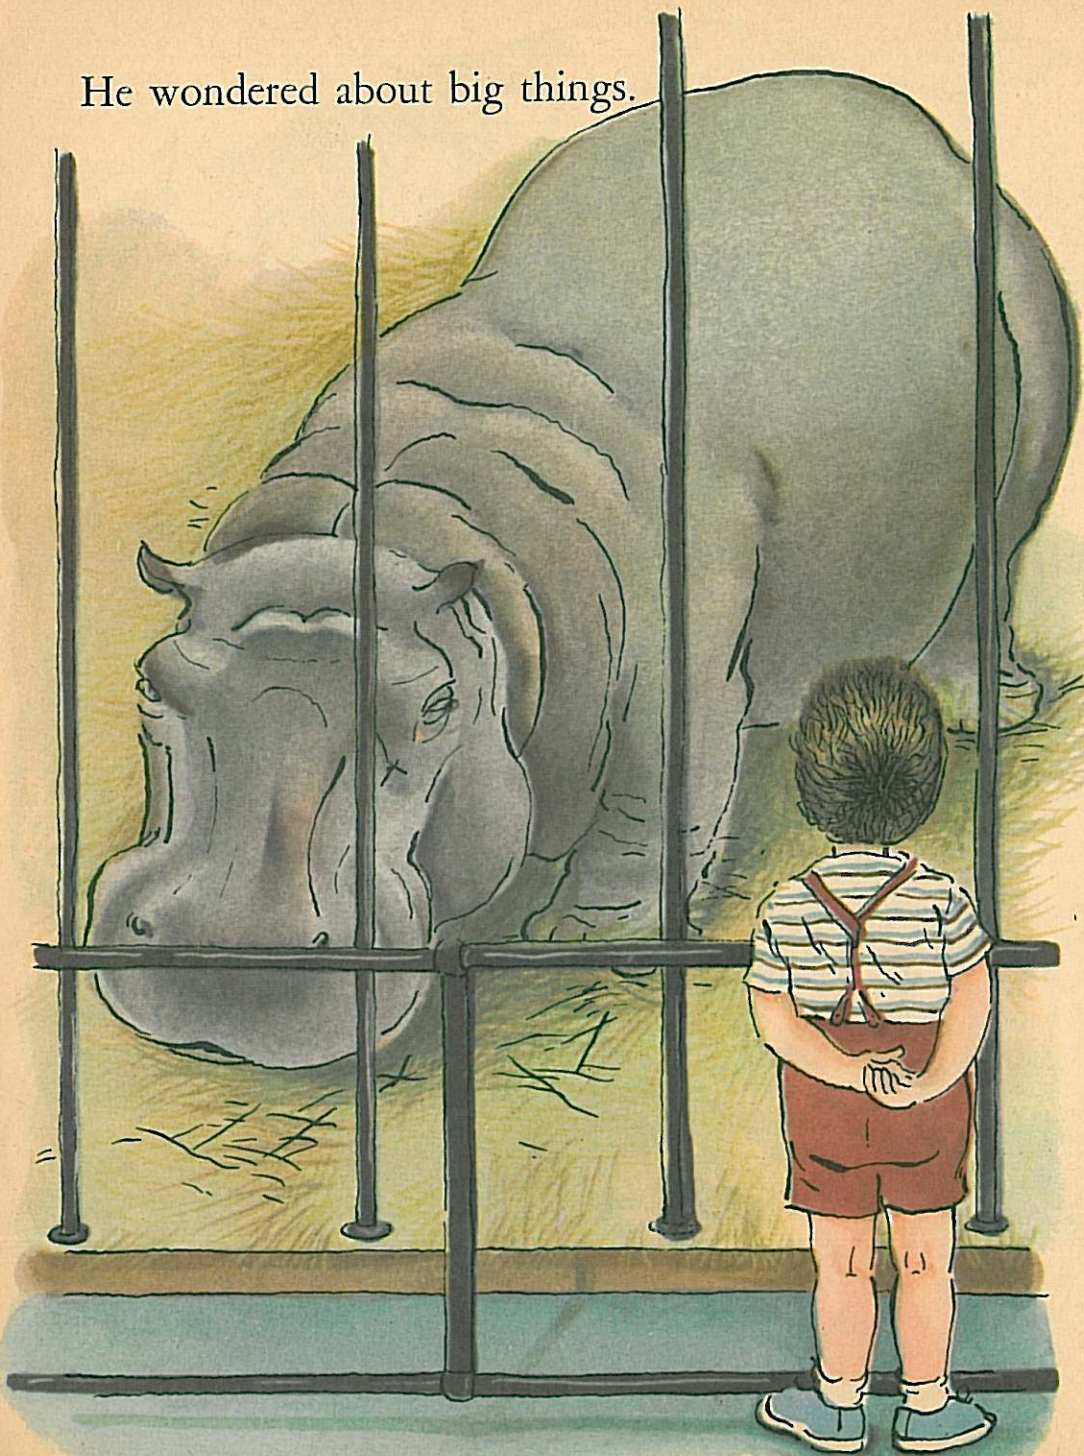

He wondered how things looked from up high.

He wondered how things looked from down low.

He wondered about big things.

He wondered about little things.

He wondered about things that went fast.

He wondered about things that went slow.

And Jamie wondered what was inside everything.

One day Jamie went for a walk.
Waggs went, too.

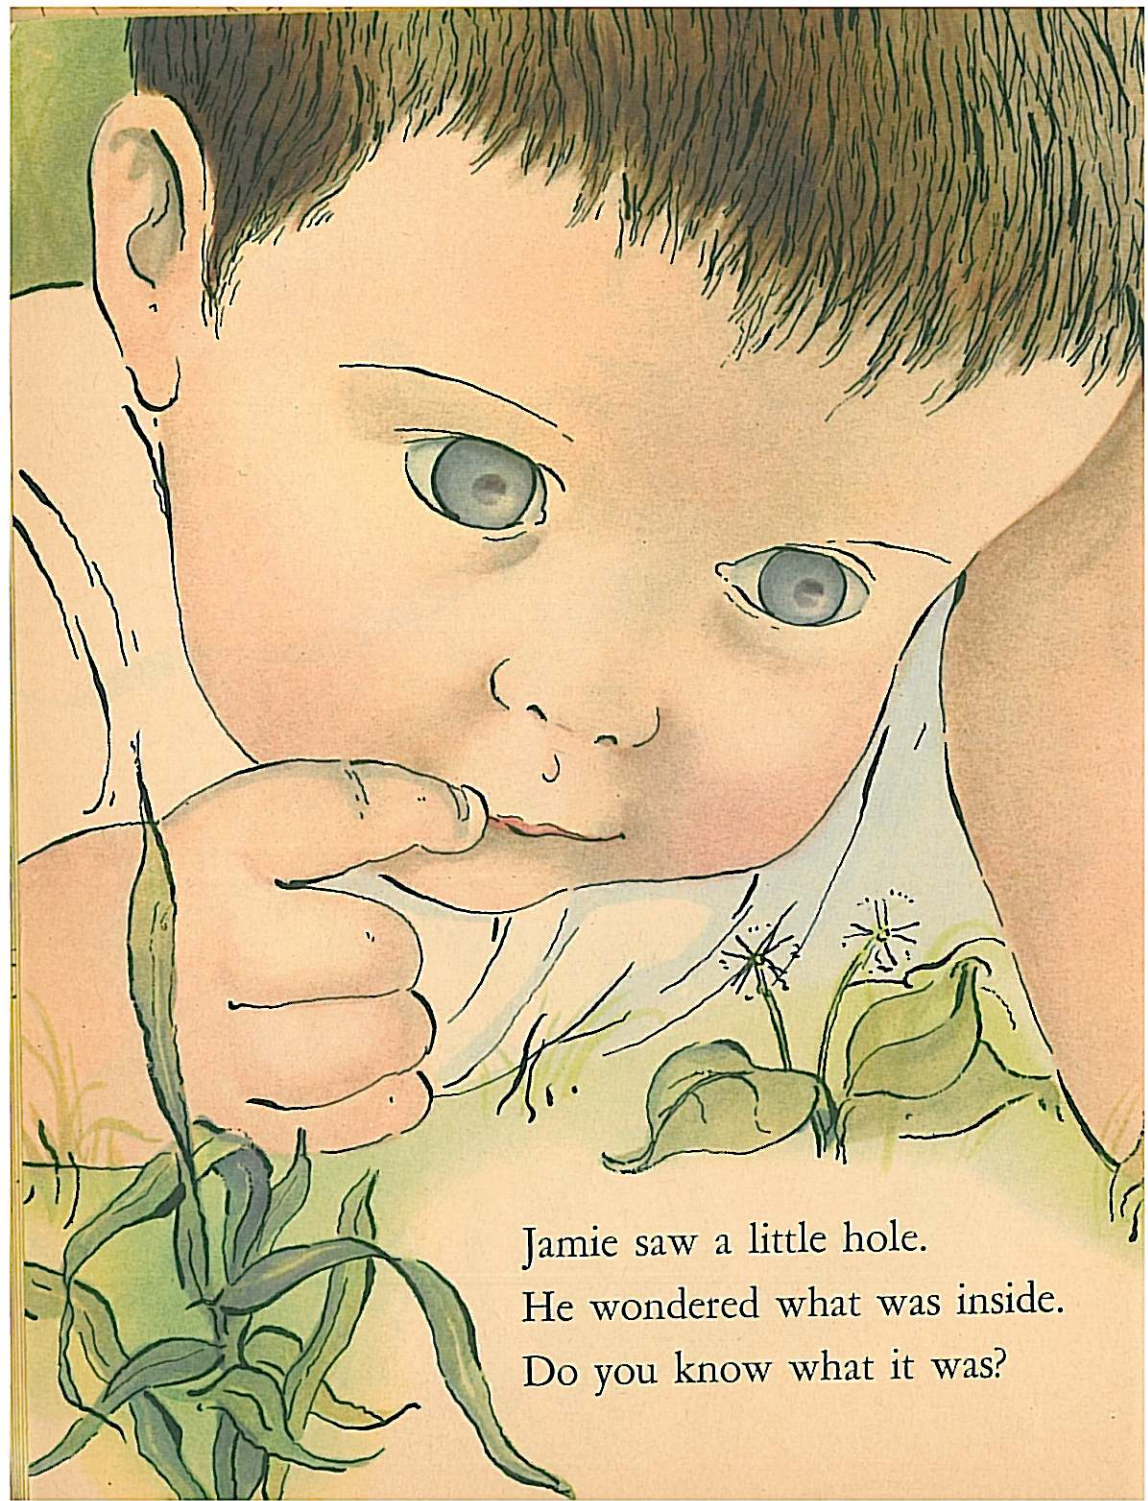

Jamie saw a hill of sand.
Jamie wondered what was inside.
Do you know what it was?

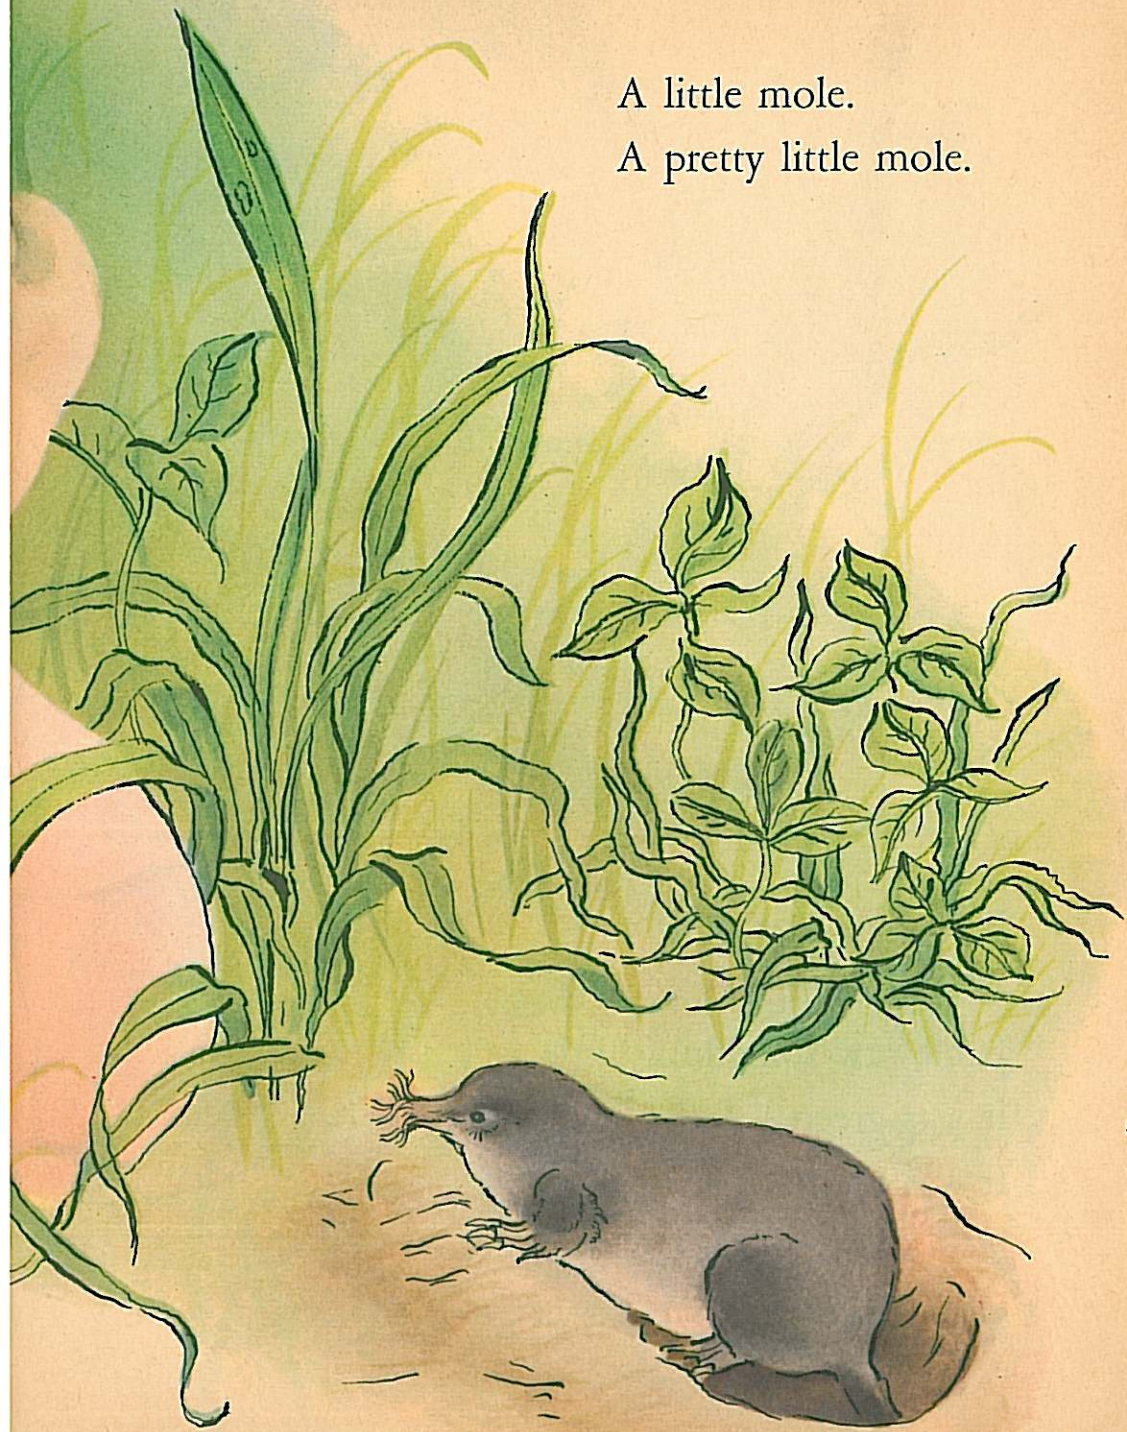

Ants!

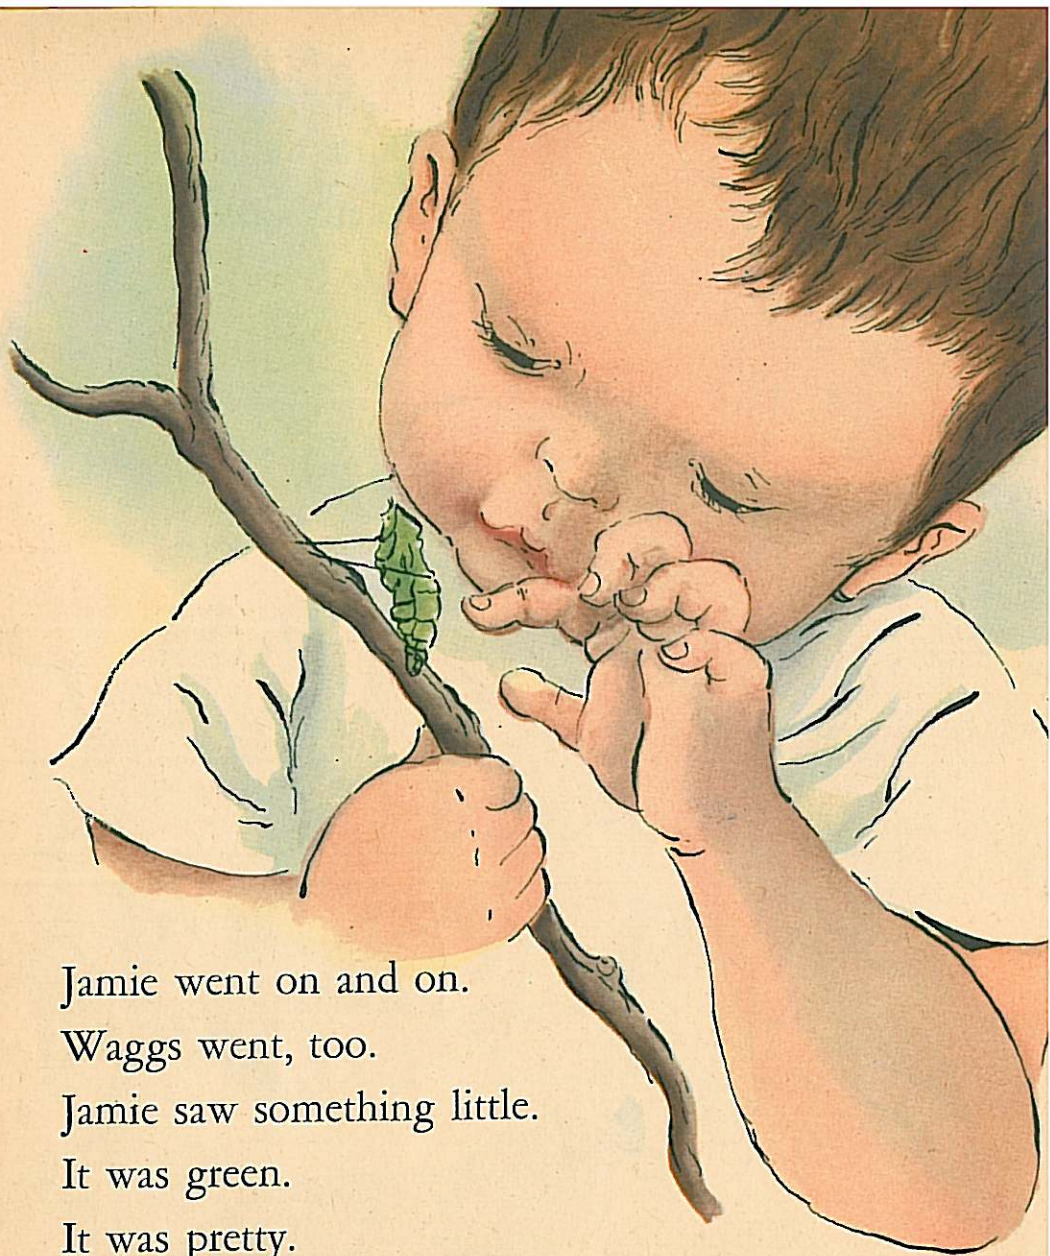

Jamie saw a little hole.
He wondered what was inside.
Do you know what it was?

A little mole.

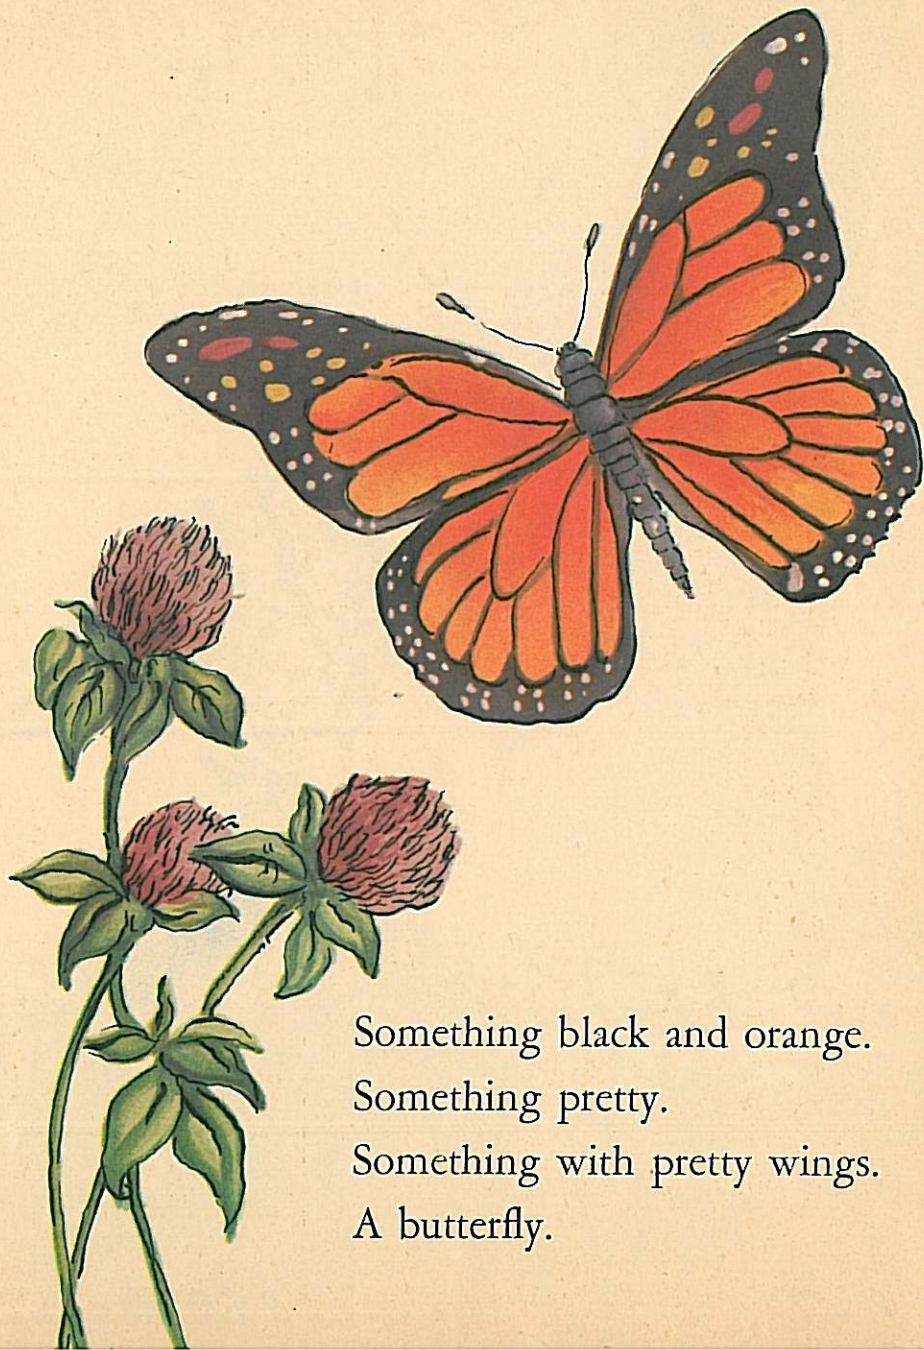

A pretty little mole.

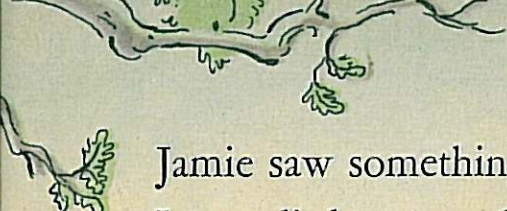

Jamie went on and on.
Waggs went, too.
Jamie saw something little.
It was green.
It was pretty.
He wondered what was inside.
Do you know what it was?

Something black and orange.
Something pretty.
Something with pretty wings.
A butterfly.

Jamie saw something else.

It was little.

It was brown.

He wondered what was inside.

Do you know what it was?

A little tree.

A little green tree.

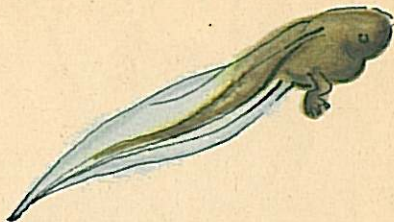

One day it would be a high tree.

Jamie went on and on.
Waggs went, too.
Jamie saw a green pond.
He looked and looked.
He wondered what was inside.
Do you know what was inside the green pond?

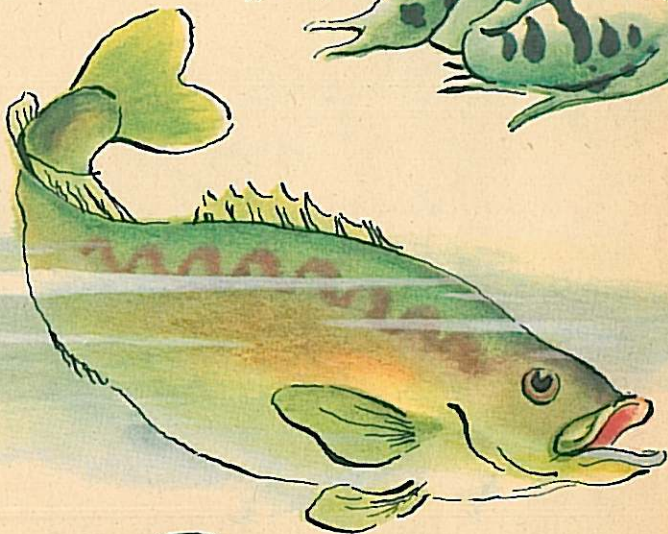

Something little and black.
A tadpole.

Something big and green.
A bullfrog.

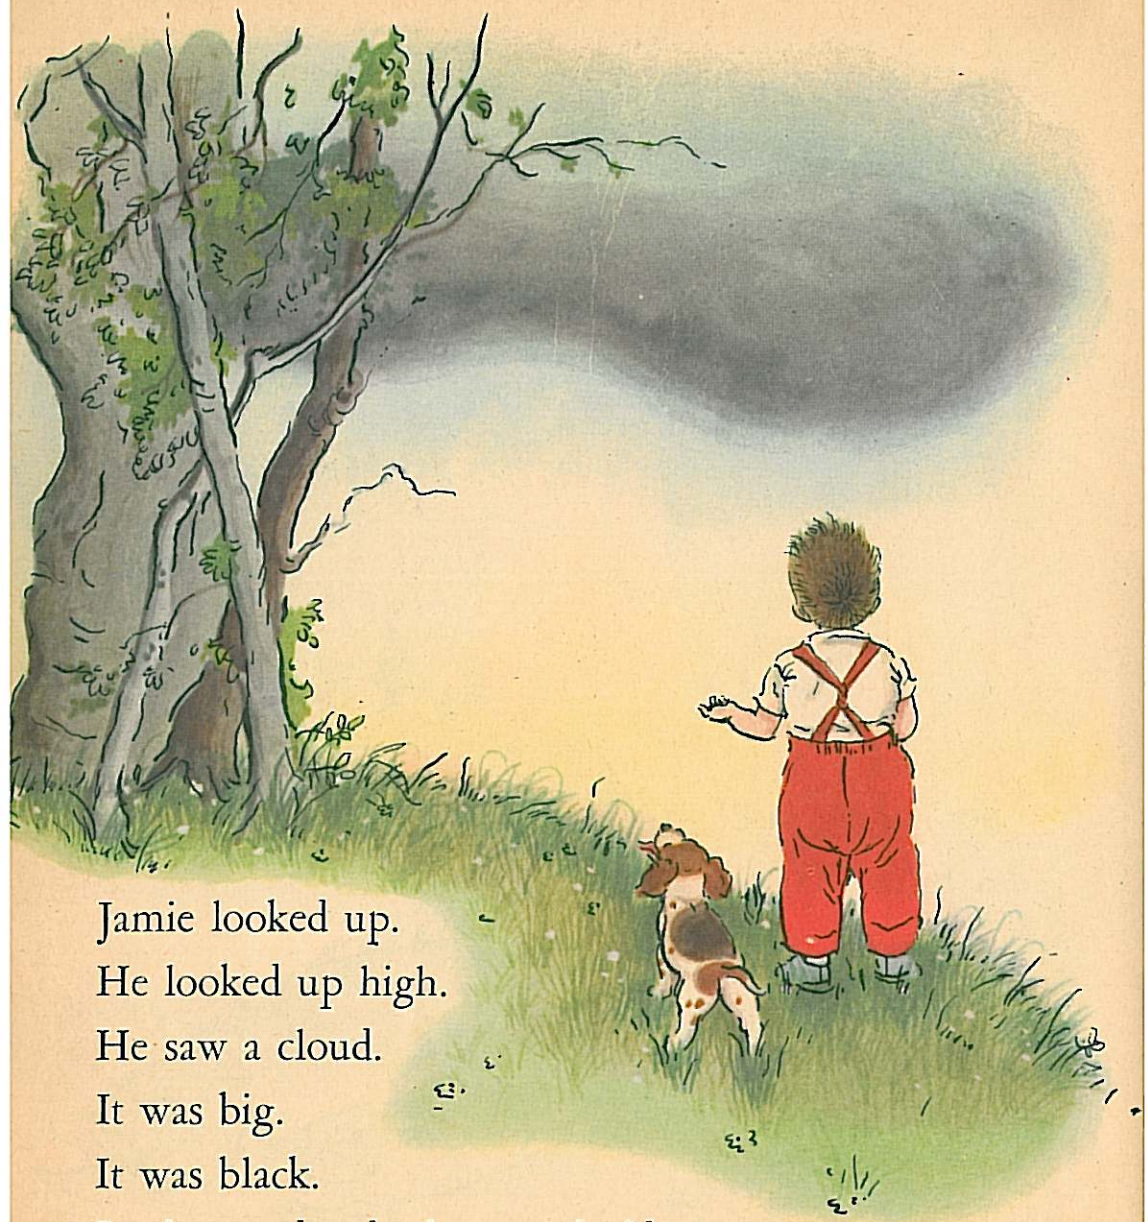

Something fast.
A fish.

Something slow.
A snail.

Jamie looked up.

He looked up high.

He saw a cloud.

It was big.

It was black.

Jamie wondered what was inside:

Do you know what was inside that big black cloud?

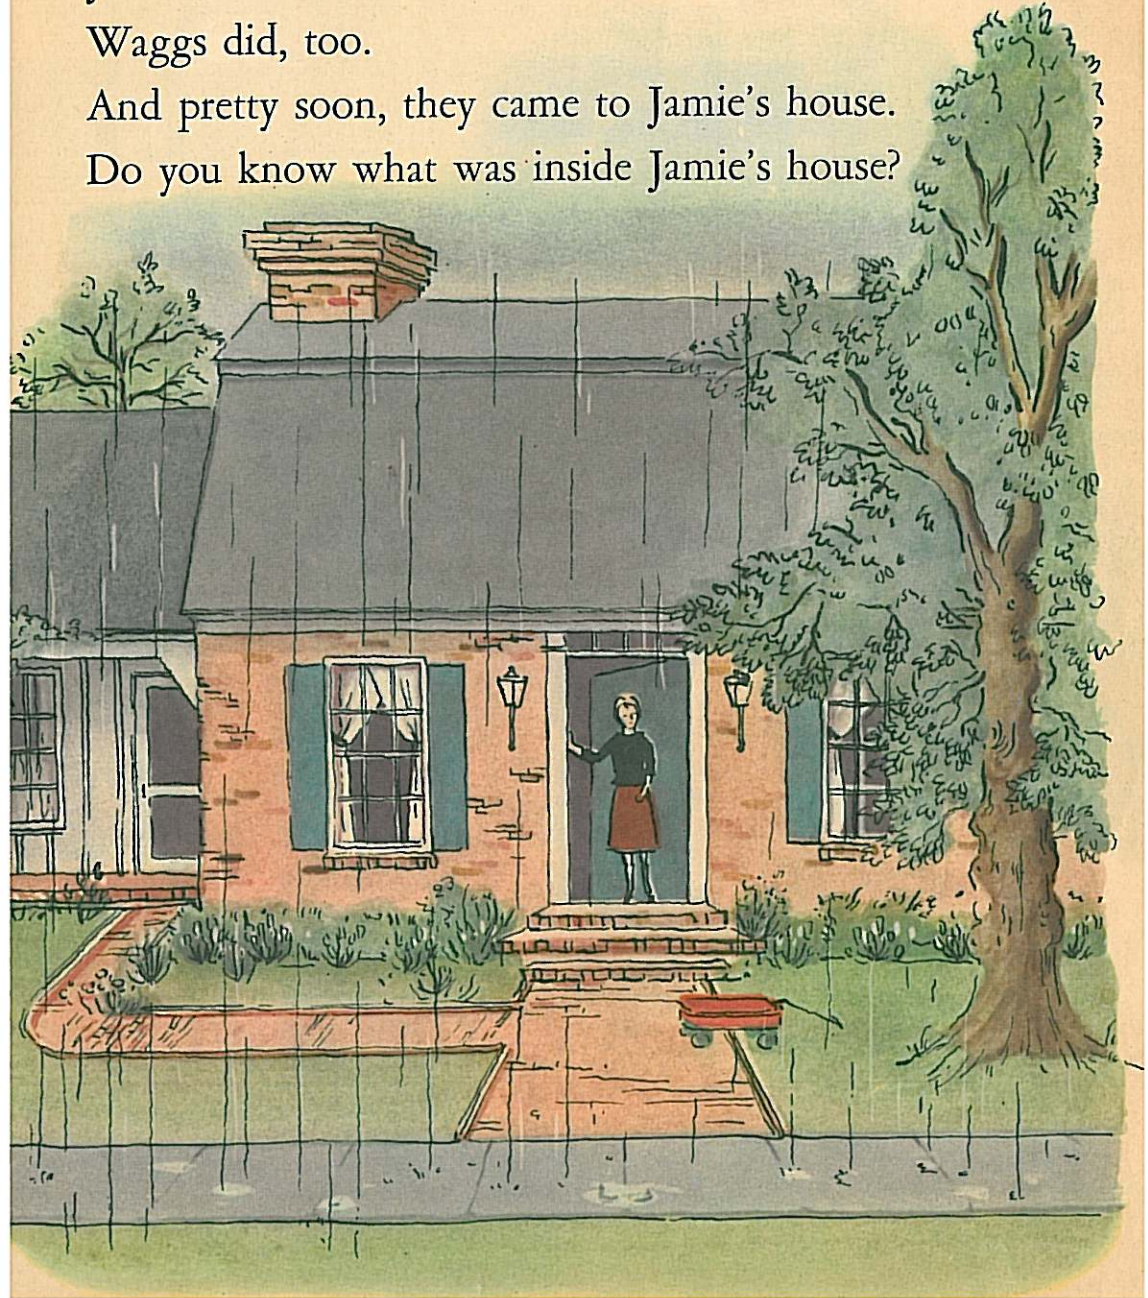

Rain!

Jamie ran and ran.

Waggs did, too.

And pretty soon, they came to Jamie's house.

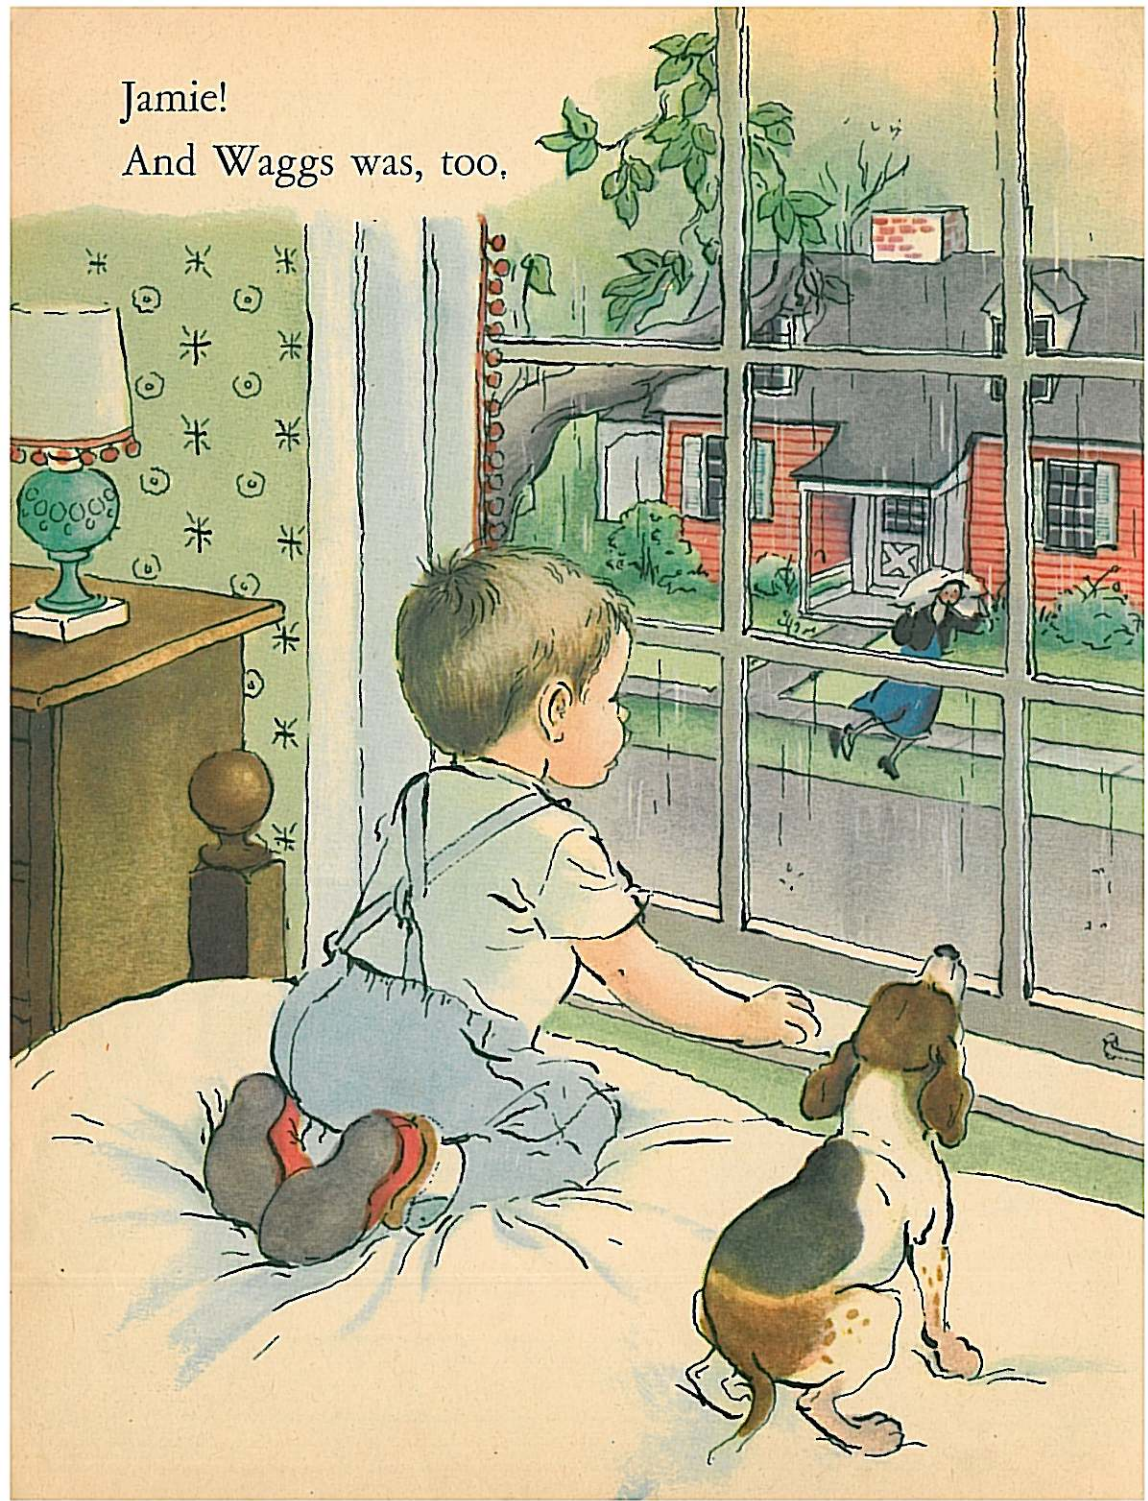

Do you know what was inside Jamie's house?

Jamie!

And Waggs was, too.
